TWO GOALS FOR ONE EVENT

A youth centre organised a weekend event to introduce local traditions to new residents. The first plan focused mainly on performances. During preparation, several residents pointed out that newcomers also needed practical information about transport and public services. The organisers therefore added an information corner, staffed by volunteers who spoke different languages. They kept the performances, but allowed time between them for conversation. Feedback showed that visitors appreciated both parts. Some came for the music and stayed to ask practical questions; others came for advice and discovered activities they wanted to join. The organisers decided that future events should be planned with residents from the beginning. They recognised that welcoming people involved more than presenting traditions: it also meant listening to what people needed.

16. Why was the original plan changed?
    A) All the performers cancelled.
    B) The centre was unable to hire volunteers.
    C) Residents identified an additional need.
17. What did the information corner provide?
    A) Tickets for international flights
    B) Help with practical local questions
    C) Lessons for professional musicians
18. What did the feedback suggest?
    A) The two parts of the event complemented each other.
    B) Visitors wanted the performances removed.
    C) Only people needing advice attended.
19. What will organisers do differently next time?
    A) Avoid asking visitors for feedback
    B) Limit the event to one language
    C) Involve residents earlier in the planning
20. Which statement best summarises the text?
    A) A cultural event should concentrate only on performances.
    B) An inclusive event responds to participants as well as presenting activities.
    C) Practical information prevents people from enjoying music.
